

To the Bookseller:

Why A Widow's Awakening should be in your Bookstore

“An inspiring story of coming to terms with the unimaginable in order to live a life with purpose and meaning, this book is a testament to the capacity of the human spirit.”

A Widow's Awakening

Everyday we hear stories on the news about workers being killed on the job and figure it's something we can't change.

In A Widow's Awakening, author Maryanne Pope tells the personal story about the loss of her husband John Petropoulos, a police officer who died in the line of duty on September 29th, 2000. He fell through a false ceiling while investigating an alarm at a building. And as Maryanne will point out, this kind of 'accident' didn't have to happen. We can make a difference to workplace safety and save lives.

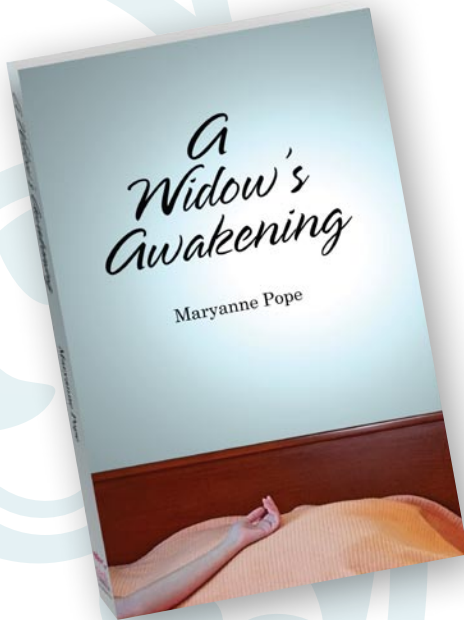

In this gripping tale told as creative non-fiction, this book has something for everyone. It's not a depressing book; it's an engaging, inspiring and powerful read.

A Widow's Awakening is an excellent addition to any bookstore shelf. It is honest, heart wrenching, and at times humourous, and will appeal to a wide range of customers. The book fits in several categories: self-help, biography, current events, politics, health, spirituality, psychology, death & dying, and grief.

20% of the proceeds of the sale of this book are going to the John Petropoulos Memorial Fund, a non-profit organization set up in memory of the author's husband. The Fund's safety initiatives educate the public that workplace safety for emergency services personnel is a shared responsibility.
